The position is a mix between an architect and a traditional team leader: I design and develop LAMP architectures mainly based on the symfony 1.4 RAD framework, a few times integrated with Zend Framework 1 or 2.

I designed and directly implemented projects for the italian govern, Samsung, Nissan, ENI, L'Oreal and so on.

Development is handled with a SCRUM-based approach, where I can share my knowledge of the Agile development (mostly focused on eXtreme Programming).

As a team leader I share my knowledge among the other members of the team (~20 people circa, among in- * and off-site developers).

I'm also responsible for scouting PHP platform and pick the right software for the projects we manufacture.

30/40% of my time is dedicated in activities not directly connected with development: for example, is my duty to write technical specifications and detailed-design documents for the projects we have, or to help account managers to handle the technical part of a

SOCIAL SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

I'm a funny guy used to work in a young and stimulating environment.

Communication is never a problem, as I like to hear other's point of view and I'm a pretty courious person.

I love multi-cultural environments.

ORGANISATIONAL SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

It's basically 2 years that I work as a team leader so I managed to grow under this perspective: I am now really able to help junior developers enter in the world of testing, design-patterns and picking, or asking for, the right choice in front of complex problems.

In my company I also support the CTO, to whom I directly report, in scouting platforms and help account managers when dealing with technical problems writing down a commercial offer or explaining the customers why we try to deliver software following an agile software lifecycle.

TECHNICAL SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

With computers, specific kinds of equipment, machinery, etc.

During this years I've become quite fluent in:
- BDD (behaviour-driven development)
- RESTful architectures
- TDD (test-driven development)
- PEAA (patterns of enterprise applications architecture)
- using user stories asd a ubiquitous language to express customers' requirements
- coding standards
- collective code ownership
- version control (I'd rather use Git)
- the symfony framework
- OrientDB, a NoSQL graph database

OTHER SKILLS

I'm often invited at conferences here in Italy and I'm currently going to Poland and India to give my presentations in foreign countries.
